The Law of Attraction, also called new thought, is a belief system that teaches that humans have the power to affect supernatural events with concentrated thinking or meditation. It is not new in the sense that it has been around in many forms and under differing names since the beginning of human history. I am someone who has studied the Law of Attraction most intensely for the last year. My reason for doing so was that my life had hit an extremely turbulent time, following divorce, the death of my father, near bankruptcy and ruined friendships. I was not coping emotionally or physically, and desperately searching for something to make me love life again. The law of attraction is mainly demonstrated through Quantum Physics. It may sound super obscure, but it is simply the study of molecular physics. There are research papers written by professors in the University of Texas that goes into the detail of such quantum facts principles such as The Higgs Boson Molecule and quantum superposition. There are structured programs on manifestation that uses scientifically proven theories for their courses and I have done a review on them.
